

It is tough to be a parent and it is tougher to be a parent of a child with Autism Spectrum Disorder.

Deviating from the ‘hard wired’ concept which presents ‘untreatable’ stigma on autism, the pioneering DOAST endeavor aims to create a positive platform where biomedical treatment targets could be effectively used to achieve functional connectivity and semi-independent existence of individuals with autism at least by their age of 18.

The components of the 'DOAST Integrated therapy' are medicines and techniques derived from the traditional Indian medical systems of Yoga, Ayurveda, Siddha.

Their corrective therapeutic concept is toxin elimination – rejuvenation and regeneration.

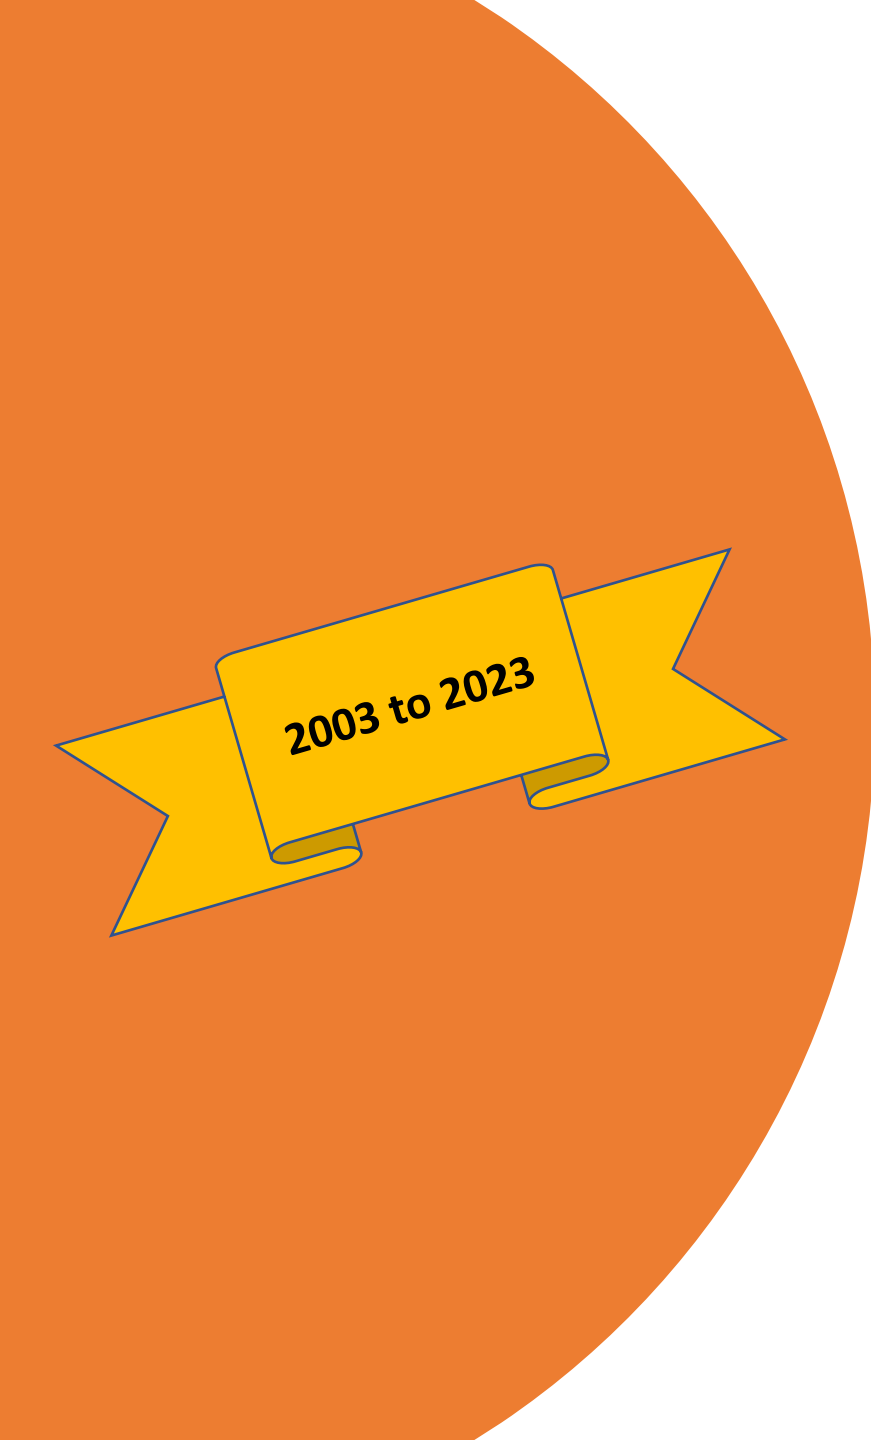

We found this therapeutic concept of the traditional Indian medical systems in complete synergy with the present-day technological understanding of chronic disease as cellular stress, molecular disorder, cytokines and signal triggers between body and brain.
